

What does diesel exhaust do to our health?

Associated health risks:

- Increased cancer risk.
- Increased asthma rates.
- Increased risk of bronchial (lung) infections and lung problems.
- Loss of productivity – missed school & work days, increased hospital visits.
- Fatigue, nausea, heart burn, headaches.
- Chronic bronchitis.
- Premature death.

Breathing diesel fumes and soot increase your risk of cancer, may cause worsen asthma and bronchitis, and hurt your lungs and heart.

Greenaction for Health & Environmental Justice
Greenaction.org
Greenaction@greenaction.org
(415) 447-3904

