

Greenaction & Bayview Hunters Point Residents Challenge Polluters, US Navy, and Government Agencies: Our Health is Not for Sale!

The fight for environmental justice in Bayview continues strong! The campaign by Greenaction and community groups to demand a full cleanup of all radioactive and toxic waste at the Hunters Point Shipyard Superfund Site has forced the Navy and government agencies to finally consider the scientific reality that climate change-induced sea level and groundwater rise will flood contamination unless it is properly cleaned up. Our lawsuit and community campaign is keeping the pressure on! We also continue our campaigns against Martin Marietta, Darling, Prologis and other dirty industries being allowed to pollute by regulatory agencies and City Hall.

Fighting for Climate Justice and against False Solutions to Climate Change

Central Coast communities continue to feel the negative impacts from the world's largest battery storage fire in Moss Landing that happened just over a year ago. Greenaction continues to work with community groups in Santa Cruz and Monterey County to advocate for environmental justice and recently submitted comments on Santa Cruz County's ordinance on Battery Energy Storage Systems. Solutions to climate change and decarbonization that do not look out for marginalized communities facing cumulative impacts do not represent environmental justice. This includes solutions that rely on dangerous lithium mining that destroy Native land and push dangerous and polluting industries in Black and Brown neighborhoods.

Frontlines of Environmental Justice

Winter 2026

Stop Pollution from the Avenal Regional Landfill!

Greenaction and residents are demanding an end to air pollution, noxious odors, diesel truck pollution and rat infestation from the giant Avenal Regional Landfill in this Spanish-speaking farmworker town in California's Central Valley. Every day hundreds of diesel trucks dump garbage and contaminated materials at this problem-plagued solid waste landfill located next to low-income housing and community businesses.

Greenaction & Quechan Tribe Launch New Air Quality Campaign and Leadership Academy Programs for Youth and Adults

Over the last few years we helped the Quechan Indian Tribe and tribal members defeat two cyanide leach gold mine projects proposed near their reservation in Winterhaven, California. We are now starting a new air quality project with the tribe and the grassroots tribal member organization Ah Mut Pipa Foundation. Our project includes community air monitoring, Youth and Adult Environmental Justice Leadership programs, community education and civic engagement on air pollution issues including mining, diesel truck emissions, and pesticide exposure. Academy programs will empower residents to have the knowledge, skills, and confidence to be effective activists and leaders in their communities impacted by pollution.

Stop Uranium Dumping Next to White Mesa Ute Community!

We continue our all-out support for the White Mesa Ute Community and Ute Mountain Ute Tribe in the campaign to close Energy Fuels' uranium mill/dump that is becoming an international radioactive dump – right next to the White Mesa Community in southern Utah. Greenaction helps unite the Ute people with Navajo/Dine, the Havasupai Tribe, and other indigenous and environmental justice allies. We oppose Trump's reckless push for more uranium mining and nuclear power.

Demand Health & Justice for Laytonville, California

Residents of the small northern California town of Laytonville including tribal members living on the Cahto Rancheria continue to suffer alarming rates of illness and death likely caused by toxic contamination from the old Mendocino County solid waste landfills. Greenaction continues supporting the people fighting to get residents out of harm's way, and to pressure the government to clean up and stop more pollution from harming the community and environment.

Rallying Against Cuts to Climate Action Planning in San Francisco

Greenaction has a history of holding the San Francisco Environmental Department accountable for their responsibility to address community environmental concerns and protect the health and safety of the environment and community in SF. In late February, we will join allies in a rally against the proposed massive cuts to the San Francisco Environment Department Budget.

NO KINGS! NO ICE! Defend Justice, Our Communities and Our Environment!

Greenaction continues to speak out against Trump's authoritarian and racist assault on democracy, justice, communities, immigrants, workers, our planet, and environment. We will join millions of Americans on March 28th in thousands of cities and towns to say "NO KINGS!" We are organizing to oppose Trump's gutting of environmental laws as he helps his billionaire polluter friends profit while harming public health and the environment.

Celebrating the 28th Anniversary of the Ward Valley Victory Protecting Native Land from Nuclear Waste
Every February, Greenaction joins the Ft. Mojave Indian Tribe and many others to celebrate the anniversary of the 113 day occupation of the federal land at Ward Valley that began February 12, 1998 and defeated the proposed nuclear waste dump! The occupation was Greenaction's very first direct action and we are honored to continue celebrating the lasting and generational benefits of frontline community organizing and solidarity with Indigenous peoples.
